YOU MUSTN'T STAY SO LATE.

The clock was loudly chiming
Upon the mantel shelf,
While love gently rhyming
A song to please himself.
It broke upon the silence,
The oracle of fate,
While some one softly whispered,
"You mustn't stay so late!"

In vain the warning finger,
In vain the silver chime,
Where were we disposed to linger,
"We take no note of time."
And so I kept on talking,
Unto my charming Kate,
Despite her admonition,
"You mustn't stay so late!"

Detaining by her glances
Affectionately bright,
Though morning swift advances
How can I say good night?
And though I would not grieve her,
Nor enmity create,
I seldom heed her chiding,
"You mustn't stay so late!"

Tis Kate I mean to marry,
Despite her chilling "No,"
And so I'm free to tarry
Whenever she bids me go.
For should I be submissive,
She'd quickly change her tone,
And say, "You do not love me!"
What makes you go so soon?"

Selected Story.

ONLY A HUSB.

Tom Darcey, yet a young man, had grown to be a very hard one. At heart he might have been all right, if his head and will had only been right; but these being wrong the whole machine was going to the bad very fast, though there were times when the heart felt something of its old true yearnings. Tom had lost his place as foreman in the great machine shop, and what money he now earned came from odd jobs of tinkering which he was able to do, here and there, at private houses; for Tom was a genius as well as a mechanic, and when his head was steady enough he could mend a clock, or clean a watch, as well as he could set up and regulate a steam engine—and this latter he could do better than any other man ever employed by the Scott Falls Manufacturing Company.

One day Tom had a job to mend a broken mowing machine and reaper, for which he received five dollars; and on the following morning he started out to his haunt—the old village tavern. He knew that his wife sadly needed the money, and that his two little children were in absolute suffering from want of clothing, and that morning he held a debate with the better part of himself; but the better part had become very weak and shaky, and the demon of appetite carried the day.

So away to the tavern Tom went, where, for two or three hours, he felt the exhilarating effects of the alcoholic draught, and fancied himself happy, as he could sing and laugh; but, as usual, stupefaction followed, and the man died out. He drank while he could stand, then lay down in a corner, where his companions left him.

It was late at night, almost midnight, when the landlady's wife came into the bar-room to see what kept her husband up, and she quickly saw Tom. "Peter," said she, in no pleasant mood, "why don't you send that miserable Tom Darcey home? He's been hanging around here too long now."

Tom's senses were not sound asleep. The deal coma had left his brain, and the calling of his name stung him to keen attention. He had an insane love for rum, but did not love the landlady. In other years Peter Tindar and himself had loved and wooed the same maiden—Ellen Goss—and he had won her, leaving Peter to take up with the vinegary spinster who had brought him the tavern; and he knew that lately the tapster had gloated over the misery of the woman who had once discarded him.

"Why don't you send him home?" demanded Mrs. Tindar, with a stamp of the foot.

"Hush, Detsy! He's got money. Let him be, and he'll be sure to spend it before he goes home. I'll have the kernel of the nut, and his wife may have husk!"

With a snuff and a snap Detsy turned away, and shortly afterward Tom Darcey raised himself on his elbow.

"Ah, Tom, are you awake?"

"Yes."

"Then rouse up and have a nice warm glass."

"No, Peter, I won't drink any more to-night."

"It won't hurt you, Tom—just a small glass."

"I know it won't!" said Tom, buttoning up his coat by the only solitary button left. "I know it won't."

And with this he went out into the chill air of midnight. When he had got away from the shadow of the tavern, he stopped and looked up at the stars, and then he looked down upon the earth.

"Aye," he muttered, grinding, his heel in the gravel, "Peter Tindar is taking the kernel, and leaving poor Ellen the worthless husk—a husk more than worthless! and I am helping him to do it. I am robbing my wife of joy, robbing my children of honor and comfort, robbing myself of love and life—just that Peter Tindar may have the kernel and Ellen the husk! We'll see!"

It was a revelation to the man. The tavern-keeper's brief speech, intended not for his ears, had come upon his senses as fell the voice of the Risen One upon the Saul of Tarsus. "We'll see," he replied, setting his foot firmly upon the ground; and then he wended his way homeward.

On the following morning he said to his wife:

"Ellen, have you any coffee in the house?"

"Yes, Tom." She did not tell him that her sister had given it to her. She was glad to hear him ask for coffee instead of the old, old cider.

"I wish you would make me a cup, good and strong."

There was really music in Tom's voice, and the wife set about the work with a strange flutter at her heart.

Tom drank two cups of the strong, fragrant coffee, and then went out, went out with a resolute step, and walked straight to the great manufactory, where he found Mr. Scott in the office.

"Mr. Scott, I want to learn my trade over again?"

"Eh, Tom, what do you mean?"

"I mean that it's Tom Darcey, come back to the old place, asking forgiveness for the past, and hoping to do better in the future."

"Tom," cried the manufacturer, starting forward and grasping his hand, "are you in earnest? Is it really the old Tom?"

"It's what's left of him, sir, and we'll have him whole and strong very soon if you'll only set him at work."

"Work! Aye, Tom, and bless you, too! There's an engine to be set up and tested to-day. Come along with me."

"I'm hands were weak and unsteady, but his brain was clear, and under his skillful supervision the engine was set up and tested; but it was not perfect. There were mistakes which he had to correct, and it was late in the evening when the work was completed.

"How is it now, Tom?" asked Mr. Scott, as he came into the testing-house and found the workmen ready to depart.

"She's all right, sir. You may give your warrant without fear."

"God bless you, Tom! You don't know how like sweet music the old voice sounds. Will you take your place again?"

"Wait till Monday morning, sir. If you will offer it to me then I will take it."

At the little cottage Ellen Darcey's fluttering heart was sinking. That morning, after Tom had gone, she had found a two dollar bill in the coffee-pot. She had been out and purchased butter and sugar and flour and tea, and a bit of tender steak; and all day long a ray of light had been dancing and shimmering before her—a ray from the blessed light of other days. With prayer and hope she set out the tea-table, and waited, but the sun went down and no Tom came. Eight o'clock—and almost nine. Oh, was it but a false glimmer after all?

Hark! The old step! quick, strong, eager for home. Yes, it was Tom, with the old grime upon his garments.

"I have kept you waiting, Nellie."

"Tom!"

"I didn't mean to, but the work hung on."

"Tom! Tom! you haven't been to the old place?"

"Yes, and I'm to have the old place, and—"

"Oh, Tom!"

And she threw her arms around his neck and covered his face with kisses. "Nellie, darling, wait a little, and you shall have the old Tom back again."

"Oh, Tom, I've got him now—bless him, bless him! My own Tom, my husband, my darling!"

And then Tom Darcey realized the full power and blessing of a woman's love.

It was a banquet of the gods, was that supper—of the household gods all restored—with the bright angels of peace and love and joy spreading their wings over the board.

On the following Monday morning Tom Darcey assumed his place at the head of the great machine shop, and those who thoroughly knew him had no fear of his going back into the slough and joylessness.

A few days later Tom met Peter Tindar on the street.

"Eh! Tom, old boy, what's up?"

"I'm up—right side up."

"Yes—I see. But I hope you have not forsaken us, Tom?"

"I have forsaken only the evil you have in store, Peter. The fact is, I concluded my wife and children had fed on husks long enough, and if there was a good kernel left in my heart, or in my manhood, they should have it."

"Ah, you heard what I said to my wife that night?"

"Yes, Peter; and I shall be grateful to you for it as long as I live. My remembrance of you will always be relieved by that tinge of warmth and brightness."

Miscellaneous.

Forgiveness.

A soldier was about to be brought before his commanding officer for some offence. He was an old offender, and had been often punished. "Here he is again," (said the officer, on his name being mentioned) "flogging—disgrace—solitary confinement—everything—has been tried with him."

Whereupon the sergeant stepped forward, and apologizing for the liberty he took, said: "There is one thing which has never been done with him yet, sir."

"What is that?" said the officer. "Well, sir," said the sergeant, "he has never been forgiven."

"Forgiveness," exclaimed the colonel, surprised at the suggestion. He reflected for a few minutes, ordered the culprit to be brought in, and asked him what he had to say to the charge?

"Nothing," was the reply, "only I am sorry for what I have done."

Turning a kind and pitiful look on the man, who expected nothing else than that his punishment would be increased with the repetition of his offence, the colonel addressed him, saying: "Well, we have tried everything with you, and now we are resolved to—forgive you!"

The tears started in his eyes, and he wept like a child. He was humbled to the dust; and, thank-his officer, he retired—to be the same old, refractory, incorrigible man?

No! from that day forward, he was a new man. He who told us the story had him for years under his eye, and a better conducted man never wore the Queen's colors. In him, kindness bent one whom harshness could not break. The man was conquered by mercy, and melted by love.

Have you to do with one with whom you have tried every kind of punishment in vain? The next time you are going to strike the blow, stay your hand, and say: "Well, I have tried everything with you; now I have resolved to forgive you."

Who knows but you also may touch the secret chord of that heart, and find the exquisite lines of the poet true:

Each block of marble in the mine
Conceals the Paphian Queen;
Apollo robed in light divine,
And Pallas, the serene:
It only needs the lofty thought,
To give the glories birth;
And lo! by skillful fingers wrought,
They captivate the earth!

So—in the hardest human heart
One little well appears,
A fountain in some hidden part,
Drift of gentle tears:
It only needs the master touch
Of love's or pity's hand,
And lo! the rock with water burst
And gushes o'er the land.

—Pen and Plover.

Suppose.

Suppose you knew that fifty persons were watching you, daily, in order to imitate your conduct, would you comport yourself exactly as you do now? Is there nothing which you would need to amend? Do you think, in your honest heart, that the world would be benefited by more of you like, taking your good and bad qualities just as they stand in your character? And yet, you know there are numbers of persons who are being influenced by you each day, consciously or unconsciously to themselves, and are thus becoming more and more like you.

Suppose your remarks about your neighbors—complimentary and otherwise—were all being overheard by them; would you say just what you have said to-day, or yesterday, or last week? And still they do hear many of them in the end, and in worse terms, too, than you employed in talking about them.

Suppose all the secret motives and thoughts of your soul were photographed before the eyes of the world; could you hold your head up as you do now, and talk proudly of other people's faults? Yet they are coming out, little by little, in your most trivial actions where you have thought worth while to place a guard.

If you could draw aside the veil of the future, and see the green mound swelling over some precious member of the home circle; would your words have the sting and the ice about them which now so often wounds that heart? Could you then think calmly of your impatience, your coldness, and your bitter neglect? Yet many have seen such a mound, and have wept a life away to recall the words and acts of unkindness, but in vain.

If it were known certainly by you that in a year from this time you would be called away from early toil, what would your life be? How does your present zeal look in the face of such a fact? Are you willing to go into the presence of God with such sheaves of your labor as you have now to bear? Can you think of the recording angel's score to your account and be content? Do you realize just now, as you will then, what it is to have a Saviour, a Redeemer? And yet you may be called hence any hour; you may not have another day to work for the Master; you may know that the record in the angel's book is being kept daily just as surely as if you looked upon it; and you may now have all the peace and confidence of a faith in the world's great Substitute for sin.

Time is bearing all forward to the age of eternal verities. There will then be no mere supposition, but the Truth will flash along the universe, and show every soul in its real state. Let this forecasting of the coming time make you vigilant, active, and prayerful.—Methodist Recorder.

KEEP CLEAR OF IT.—In the Arabian Nights is the story of a mountain of load-stone which drew towards it, by its tremendous power of attraction, every piece of iron that was brought within the range of its influence. Even ships at sea, passing near the shore of the land where was that mountain felt its force on their anchors and chains and bars, so that they were irresistibly drawn closer and closer to it, until the very bolts and nails started from the beams and planks of the doomed vessels, and fastened themselves on the sides of the destroying mountain, while the ships fell to pieces in consequence, and their passengers and crew were lost in the great sea. Prudent sailors gave that shore a wide berth. It would have been criminal folly for them to go nearer to it than was needful. But the danger from that fabled mountain was less than is the peril from intoxicating liquors.

The longer I live, the less is my faith in the genuineness of a death-bed repentance. God will save a man in the dying hour, if the man repents; but does a sinner truly repent at a time like that? There is a sorrow for sin which springs from a cowardly fear of dying; and when that fear is removed and the man who was in the jaws of death is rescued and restored to health, there is the same sinful life as before. He who seemed to be so peaceful and resigned, comes back to health, and is a hardened, unrepentant sinner still.—J. I. Bowtell.

Moral Suasion.

The following short dialogue, supposed to have taken place between a temperance lecturer and a liquor seller, exemplifies the force of the argument in favor of moral suasion on the subject of the liquor traffic:

Seller.—I don't like this movement in favor of prohibition that you temperance folks are advocating; why don't you use moral suasion?

Lecturer.—We do. We have tried it on you, and you say you have a right to sell liquor and you mean to continue to sell it. Moral suasion don't stop you.

Seller.—Well, I am in a free country and have a right to sell as much liquor as I please; I pay my license tax and you have no right to try to force me to give up my rights.

Lecturer.—That's true enough. You pay for your license and you have the legal right to sell liquor under it, and moral suasion can't reach you. Now, all we intend to do is, to try moral suasion on your neighbors and endeavor to persuade them not to give you a license to sell an article to them and their children, that can only injure them and put money in your pocket. Moral suasion, sir, is the great lever of the Temperance reform; we are going to try it on the law-making power.—Selected.

Reducing a Story.

A quaint Scotch minister was given somewhat to exaggeration in the pulpit. His clerk reminded him of its ill effects upon the congregation. He replied that he was not aware of it, and wished the clerk, the next time he did it to give a cough by way of hint.

Soon after he was describing Samson's tying the foxes' tails together. He said: "The foxes in those days were much larger than ours, and they had tails twenty feet long."

"Ahem! come from the clerk's desk."

"That is, continued the preacher, according to their measurement; but by ours they were fifteen feet long."

"Ahem!" louder than before.

"But as you may think this is extravagant, we'll just say they were ten feet."

"Ahem! ahem!" still more vigorous.

The parson leaned over the pulpit and shaking his finger at the clerk, said: "You may cough there all the night long, mon, I'll nae tak off a fut more. Would ye has the foxes wid une teels 'at at?"—Chris. Weekly.

Contentment.

How strange, with so many blessings around us, we should now and then, because of the absence of some particular comfort, give way to a spirit of discontent? How prone to under-rate a thousand good things, and complain because we are short even one thing which we want, and even this may not be for our good. For illustration: A man in good health, with his wife and children all well, and possessing everything necessary for comfort, imagines that he has not as much money as he needs to carry out his worldly plans, and begins to fret and lose his patience, and rob himself of all the luxury which his blessings would otherwise afford. He will not be content with God's providence. This is an every day occurrence. Suppose under such circumstances we were to sit down and open a ledger account, and put down on one side all the positive blessings he now has; then put down on the other side what he has to complain of, and see how much he will lack on this latter side, to bring up the balance.

St. Paul never wrote a truer sentiment than this: "Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into the world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." Let us ponder this thought, and remembering how soon we must leave this world, and all that we have here, may it beget in us a spirit of true contentment.—S. C. Advocate.

An Ohio young man sat down the other day and wrote on backs of a couple of postal-cards. Then he turned them over and directed them, but by some mischance placed the addresses on the wrong cards. The result was that a shirt manufacturer in New York got a very polite invitation to go carriage riding somewhere out in Ohio, while the young man's girl was made frantic by receiving the following: "Please send me samples of the stuff your shirts are made of."

Experience teaches us how to do many things, but when a man sits down on a bent pin experience has to take a back seat, while instinct comes to the front.

Beware of inquisitive persons. a wonderful curiosity to know all is accompanied with as great a desire to tell it again.

This will enable the female wearer of false teeth to have a set to match every suit she owns, both in color and design. With pink goods, pink teeth; with striped goods, striped teeth and so on. "I never saw such a restless child!" exclaimed the mother as she tried to fit the boy with a new jacket. The little fellow grew quiet and thoughtful for a moment, and then suddenly exclaimed: "I know why I'm so, ma—the day God made me I guess the dust was a-flying awful."

An individual noted for his utter swerving veracity was telling a rather tough yarn to an admiring crowd. Some skeptical person shook his head, and offered to bet that the story was an invention. "Bat I pass," said a minister, one Sunday, in dismissing one theme of his subject to take up another. "You couldn't," shouted our irrepressible, as a bachelor visitor finished an eulogium on cremation by an expressed wish that rather than be "confined, cribbed, confined," he might become the subject of a Hindoo suttee—"you couldn't; you haven't got any wife!" "That's no matter," growled the Colonel as he beat a hasty retreat (the Colonel is also not connubial), "that's no matter; plenty of men would be glad to lend me theirs for the occasion." MONROE, N. C. JULY 7, 1877.

The Late Storm at the North.

Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, suffered severely by the storm on the 2d inst. Much property was destroyed, and many lives were lost. Some of the incidents of the storm were of a startling character. Near Philadelphia an old frame house was completely demolished, and a colored woman—one of the occupants—was caught in the timbers and killed. A gentleman, walking across a field, was caught in the vortex, lifted off his feet and carried away. When he recovered consciousness he found himself lying on a pile of lumber two miles away, with his jaw broken, his body bruised and clothes torn. Three ordinary wooden bars, with their contents taken up and destroyed, so that nothing recognizable is left of them. A contractor was erecting a house, it being in an advanced state of completion, just ready to plaster and paint. It was entirely blown away and destroyed, the very foundation being torn up and removed.

A cow was blown 200 yards and instantly killed. A stone house had its roof torn off and the end blown away. An orchard of apple trees was torn up by the roots and carried a considerable distance, the leaves and every particle of bark being stripped. A buggy was taken up and blown away and the horse so bruised that he had to be killed. A roof of a barn was blown off and wrapped tightly around a tree at the distance of one-quarter of a mile.

Eight families are left entirely homeless, their household goods, as well as the houses themselves, being entirely gone. The linen, bedquilts, &c., were torn into shreds and are entirely valueless.

A wagon loaded with grain was taken up, the grain thrown off, and the wagon blown an eight of a mile, the hubs being wrenched out of the wheels during its progress. In one of the barns blown away a horse was in the stall, and was found there after the storm piled up around him, and perfectly sound and unharmed, although trembling in every limb. A tree, two feet in diameter, was snapped like a pipe stem. The growing corn was cut off above the ground as clean as though with a knife. Heavy pieces of timber, weighing two or three hundred pounds, were caught up and carried along as though they were nothing more than straws, and a hedge of the tough Osage orange, well trimmed and closely matted, was stripped of all its thorns, leaves and bark, nothing remaining but the whitened boughs and smaller twigs. A heavy axle was torn from under a farm wagon and blown completely through a frame house, leaving large shattered apertures at its points of entrance and exit.

Near Franklin, Indiana, the house of Mr. Brummer was demolished, killing the entire family of five persons, and the house of George Pressler was also torn to pieces, killing the entire family of six persons.

The Louisiana Returning Board Indicted for Forgery.

NEW ORLEANS, July 5.—State Senator J. Henry Burch, was arrested Tuesday evening, under a writ of the District Court of East Baton Rouge, charged with embezzlement of school funds, was today remanded to the custody of the sheriff of East Baton Rouge.

Attorney General Ogden and District Attorney have filed information against J. Madison Wells, T. C. Anderson, Louis M. Kenner, and G. Cassanave, charging them under section 833 of the revised statutes with altering and publishing as true certain altered, false, forged and counterfeited records. Immediately after filing information, capias were issued for the arrest of the parties named. Wells and Kenner surrendered themselves to the sheriff. The information is very lengthy, and charges them with having, on the 4th of December, 1876, falsely and feloniously altered and published as true the altered, forged and counterfeited elections returns for the Presidential elections from the parish of Vernon, at the election of November last, by adding 158 votes to each of the Hayes electors, and deducting 895 from each of the Tilden electors. Bail has been fixed at $5,000. The cash has been furnished by Wells and Kenner. Anderson and Cassanave will surrender themselves and furnish bond.

They are not accustomed to executions in Georgia. When the time approached last week for hanging a man who had been convicted of murder, the sheriff resigned rather than do the honors of the occasion and no one could be found who would accept the office. The coroner, who it seems "was an old friend of the condemned man," finally undertook the job. With happy thoughtfulness for the convenience of the spectators the gallows was built as close as possible to the village bar-room.—Nat. Observer.

Hayes Stands by His Circular.

(Special to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, July 1.

The President has made up his mind to fight the politicians on the merits of his recent order to office-holders. He said very recently to a friend that he knew the order would create dissatisfaction in the party, but he believed it was right in principle, if it did lose the party some voters at first, and he meant to have it rigidly carried out. He regards himself, as he says, at the head of a large business, which he is expected to run in the interest of the people. He does not think it right or business-like that men who are paid by the government for attending to its interests should be wasting their time attending and manipulating conventions, and he announces that the office-holders who come in conflict with this order will suffer. He says the Southern policy is a fixed fact, and will not be changed, and intimates rather forcibly that the party must come to his notions, and that he believes it will do so.

The Collectorship.

The fight over the collectorship of this district waxed in Washington. Dockery we are told is leading the anti-Winstead party—while Wheeler, of Forsyth, Henderson and Hanes, of Davidson, are on the war-path and going for the Colonel's scalp. Hanes is going for Henderson and is armed with several yards of the early record of W. F. H. which he is swinging round savagely; but Billy says harmlessly. The latter says he will stay till frost if he don't capture the fort before then, while others seem to think Wheeler has the inside track. Col. Winstead's friends feel assured, as he does himself, that his hair and that none of them will show round in his old shoes.—Greensboro Patriot.

The University Normal School.

A correspondent of the Raleigh "News" writes as follows under date of July 3rd, in regard to the first day's proceedings at the University Normal School:

CHAPEL HILL, July 3, 1877. "The University Normal School opened this morning with 97 on the roll. We hear of many others coming during the week. Prof. McIver writes that the Greensboro Normal has been suspended, and the teachers will come here. Those already on the ground are much pleased. Services at the opening began with the Hymn, "A charge to keep I have"—then prayer by Prof. Mangum. Then Capt. John E. Dugger, who has been appointed Secretary, assisted by Dr. R. H. Lewis, of Wake Forest, Prof. Grandy and Prof. Tomlinson, enrolled the names of the pupil-teachers, among them a goodly number of ladies. Then President Battle made a short address, showing the intimate connection between the University and the teachers, the grandeur of the teachers' calling, and the gratification all the friends of the University feel in throwing open the doors of the University to them. He was followed by Prof. Ladd, who made an excellent speech and a fine impression. He established at once a sympathy between his hearers and himself, and did away with the nervousness that many feel at entering the school. He read the programme. The services of the school will begin at 8 in the morning and last until 6 in the evening with some intermissions. After Prof. Ladd's address the pupil-teachers visited the museum, the society hall, &c."

The Crop Prospect.

Reports for the month of June have been received at the Agricultural Department from about twenty-five of the leading agricultural counties of the State. These reports are of the most encouraging nature. The wheat yield has turned out much better than was expected, and since the May reports there has been a marked improvement in all the crops, and those reported as behind hand and languishing have by the most propitious seasons, "caught up." The twenty-five reports thus far received show that:

Labor is reliable and abundant at average of $3 per month. There has been no damage to the crops this season—rain has been general and all crops looking well. There has been much more millet and grasses sown this year than usual—and so far expectations have been realized. There is a marked improvement in the implements now in use as compared with five years ago, and perceptible decrease in the purchase of commercial manures. The condition of the stock is good—no serious diseases raging. The amount of acreage in cultivation has not been decreased, but the tillage has been better than for years. There is a marked improvement in agricultural pursuits.—Nat. Observer.

The Franks Trial Closed.

The Franks trial closed in Washington last Friday. The prosecutor succeeded in showing that Franks had drawn fees to the amount of $111.50 to which he was not entitled, and the Commission has decided to remand him for trial in the Federal Court of this State. If it was the aim of the prosecutor, as charged by his friends, to involve Douglas it has failed. Had they let Mr. Douglas' honesty alone and fought him on the ground of incompetency they might have succeeded better, for while his integrity is unimpeachable he is as much out of place in that office as a fish out of water. He is of an easy, confiding disposition and as little adapted to the stern duties of his office as an anchorite would be for a chief of police. The trouble with him has been in the devilment and lawlessness of his deputies, who swarmed through the country, many of them filled with rum and inflated with authority and committing outrages that they ought to have had the tops of their heads shot off for. But it is not air to hold Mr. Douglas responsible for all of this, for the majority of these appointments were simply political ones, made as appointments have been usually made in the South since the war. The party leaders pointed out and Mr. Douglas went through the form of appointing. And that's about the sum and substance of it. The deputies under him are not a bit better nor a bit worse than the average run of that class have been in this State. The Franks trial, however, may result in putting an end to some of the abuses heretofore practiced and of securing a better order of men to fill the responsible positions in the Marshal's office. And perhaps it will secure a little more of the personal attention of the Marshal himself.—Greensboro Patriot.

Eastern War News.

The Russians came very near making a total wreck of Rutschuk, a city of Bulgaria, with between 30,000 and 40,000 inhabitants. It was strongly fortified, and had a mosque. The Russian artillery destroyed every thing of value nearly. The Turks complain bitterly of the want of humanity, and appeal to the justice of Europe to condemn such reckless and cruel conduct.

It is believed that an important, possibly a decisive, battle will soon be fought at Bjela. Both the Russians and Turks appear to be preparing for a great struggle at that strategic point. It is thought to be the best position the Turks can secure. If defeated, they have fortifications in their rear to which they can fly; if victorious, they retard greatly the onward march of the Russians towards Constantinople.

The Russians have secured a strong foothold on the Bulgarian side of the Danube. The effected the passage of the great river with far less difficulty or loss of life than was expected. The Turks are said to be falling back. Rutschuk, one of their strongest strategic points, is reported abandoned. If this be so, it would indicate an intention on the part of the Turks to make the Balkan mountains the main battle ground. The situation now is decidedly discouraging to the friends of the Crescent.

LONDON, July 2.—Trustworthy information has been received from Turkish sources that the Turks are devastating a large portion of Bulgaria for the purpose of preventing the Russians from provisioning their army. The harvest has been carried off, the fruit trees have been felled, and the torch has been applied to the large grass plains. Everything that could be of any use to an invading army has been removed or destroyed, and the people are left in utter destitution. The utmost consternation prevails among the unfortunate people, who see no prospect before them but famine and pestilence added to the horrors of war.

Fazli Pasha telegraphs to Constantinople from Sookoun Kaleh that the Turks, having landed at Tchamdjari and commenced to erect entrenchments, were on June 27 attacked by 15,000 Russians. Both sides were subsequently reinforced, the Turkish reinforcements arriving by sea from Batoum. The Turks, with the assistance of iron-clads, routed the Russians with the loss of 2,000 killed and 4,000 wounded. A telegram from the commander of the fleet confirms the foregoing.

A dispatch from Constantinople, dated Saturday evening, confirms the announcement, forwarded two days to the Herald regarding the great battle now in progress near Sistova and says: "Reinforcements are being hastily forwarded from Rutchuk, Shumla and Nicopolis. The Turks are still holding their ground and their artillery is inflicting great loss upon the Russians." A dispatch from Constantinople of twenty-four hours' later date says:—"Abdul kerim, replying to a telegram sent him to-day (Sunday) by the Council of Ministers, reports that up to the present 60,000 Russians have crossed the Danube. A battle is imminent at Bjela, which is expected to last several days."

According to late statistical reports the destruction of sheep by dogs is greater in North Carolina than in any other State.

Charlotte Observer: Telegraphic information of the death of Judge John L. Bailly, of Asheville, whose dangerous illness was noticed in the last issue of the Observer, was received in this city yesterday. He died Monday at his summer home on Black Mountain, in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

Charlotte Observer: On Sunday afternoon Dr. Samuel B. Watson, the oldest and one of the best known and most successful physicians in this county, had his left leg broken near the thigh joint, by a kick from his horse. The accident occurred about five miles from Dr. Watson's home in Morning Star township. He was carried home and the fractured limb set about 12 o'clock Sunday night. Dr. Gibbon visited him yesterday and Dr. Graham will go out to-day. As Dr. Watson is fully seventy years old, although a remarkably young looking and active man, it is feared that serious results may ensue. He also received a slight wound on the right thigh at the same time.

The official career of Heaton, as Clerk of the Superior Court of New Hanover, has at last come to an end, as will be seen by reference to the decision of the Supreme Court, filed on yesterday and printed in this morning's Observer. This action of the Court will carry daylight to the people of New Hanover, who have so long suffered from his official misconduct. Heaton is the same man who, convicted of staying the election in Wilmington in 1874, and sentenced to imprisonment therefor, was pardoned by Gov. Brogden. But we are happy to know that Brogden is no longer Governor and Heaton is no longer Clerk. We congratulate our friends of the Cape Fear upon their deliverance.—Nat. Observer.

General News.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The Franks hearing has closed. The commissioners will decide on Monday whether to send him back to North Carolina for trial or discharge him. The proceedings were feeble; some say purposely so.

Twelve years ago Richmond, with 45,000 inhabitants, lay half in ruins—now she has rebuilt the whole of the burnt district, has established two hundred factories, and with a population of 75,000 people is the handsomest city in the world.

ANOTHER HEAVY STORM IN THE WEST.—CINCINNATI, July 3.—Another heavy storm swept through northern and central Ohio and Indiana last evening, and this morning, and last evening at Elkhart, Ind., six houses were levelled, and four others partially destroyed. Mr. Craig was blown off his barn and had his arm broken. Mr. Walters was blown out of his house and had his head and back dangerously cut. Several buildings were blown down at other places and many persons were severely hurt and some were killed. Three men near Waterford were struck by lightning, one of them instantly killed.

Washington Items.

Reports of a disintegration of the Cabinet are current. There are rumors that Mr. Key finds he can relieve the President by resigning, and Mr. McCrary, in view of the expression of his Iowa Republican constituents, is bound to resign.

The President is irritated over the indictment of Wells and Anderson for perjury, in connection with the Louisiana Returning Board. The President's idea was that all matters of this character were condoned by the Matthews-Foster bargain.

Secretary Everts submitted to the Cabinet President Diaz's order to the Mexican General Trevina, ordering him to resist with force the invasion of Mexico by the United States troops as authorized by instructions to Gen. Ord. The Mexican order was discussed but no action was taken. Gen. Mata has not yet had an interview with Everts concerning his recognition as minister of Diaz's government.

JONES told Brown that he could always get away from home of an evening by telling his wife that the noise of her Sewing Machine made him nervous, and that nothing composed him so well as a long rattling walk; but when Brown tried this dodge on his wife, she kicked his hat under the sofa and said, "You can't play any of Bill Jones' tricks on me, and this Light-Running 'Domestic' doesn't make any noise, either. I ain't permanently insane if I did marry you." Brown didn't go out that night, but he would have given a week's salary to have been some where else when she found out that he had lighted his cigar with her "Domestic" Paper Fashion for a winter Dolman.

At Townsend & Hanford's Cash Store can be found a full stock of fresh goods, for sale cheap.

FRUIT JARS.—We call special attention to the advertisement of Mr. W. N. Tillinghast, offering glass fruit jars at very low prices, with freight paid to Wilmington. The freight on a barrel containing 1 1/2 dozen half gallons or three dozen quarts, from Wilmington here, is about forty cents. We received a barrel of the half gallons last week, and found them sound and in good order, having been carefully packed. The prospects of the peach crop is good and a considerable portion of it should be saved for "hard times." Corn, tomatoes and other vegetables might be saved much better and cheaper than Northern goods, and we advise all to buy the self-sealing glass jars, as they are convenient and durable, there being nothing about them to rust or wear out, and with ordinary care will not break. We see nothing to prevent them lasting twenty years or more.

IS YOUR LIFE WORTH 10 CENTS?—Sickness prevails everywhere, and everybody complains of some disease during their life. When sick, the object is to get well; now to say plainly that no person in this world that is suffering with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint and its effects, such as Indigestion, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, palpitation of the Heart, Depressed Spirits, Bileousness, etc., can take GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER without getting relief and cure. If you doubt this, go to your Druggist ENGLISH & ASHCRAFT and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try. Regular size 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

Go to Townsend & Hanford's and see their new stock of Ladies bib collars and collarettes, collars and cuffs, ribbons, flowers, ornaments, laces and trimmings.

FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE for August is laden with riches, and is worthy of universal admiration for its select and edifying literature, together with its 100 illustrations that enrich its 128 pages. Turkey is fully represented, and other parts of the Old World receive attention. Some of its stories are full of pathos, while its innumerable paragraphs and short articles are highly entertaining and instructive. A column of our space would not suffice us in which to give a detailed synopsis of its contents. It is a beautiful work. Buy it and see for yourselves. The annual subscription price is $3, for which the "Sunday Magazine" will be mailed, post-paid, to your address—or single copies for 25 cents. Send to Frank Leslie, 537 Pearl Street, New York.

SEND IN THE NEWS.—When anybody dies, gets married, steals anything, builds a house, makes a sale, gets hurt, or does anything that is remarkable, or that will interest the public to know, and you have reason to believe that you know as much about the occurrence as any one in your neighborhood, don't wait for some other man to report it, or trust us to find it out by instinct, but come and tell us about it, or send it in a letter. This is the way news is supplied, and it takes a good supply of that necessary article to make a good home newspaper. Reader, let us know all the news in your neighborhood.

JOB PRINTING.—We continue to do Job Work of every description. Persons wishing pamphlets, posters, dodgers, cards, letter heads, bill heads or anything in the printing line executed, will find it to their interest to call at the ENQUIRER PRINTING OFFICE. Best work and lowest prices guaranteed.

DIRECTIONS FOR PUTTING UP FRUIT IN SCREW TOP GLASS JARS.—Steam the Jars over hot water, then rinse in it, to prevent breaking. The fruit should be boiling hot, throughout. Fill the Jars brimming full, packing the fruit down with a spoon or other pointed instrument; put on the lids and screw the lock-rings down tight, immediately. When the fruit has cooled somewhat, it will shrink, thus producing a vacuum in the Jar and a pressure on the top of the lid, which will compress the rubber ring; screw the locks down again as far as possible. The principle is that the fixed air in the fruit is driven out by the heat, and that sealing up the fruit while in that condition (boiling hot) prevents decay. If the work is done properly the fruit will keep without sugar, though many housekeepers think the fruit is better with a moderate quantity of sugar. Vegetables require to be cooked. Corn must be very thoroughly cooked.

Another stock of that good coffee just arrived at Townsend & Hanford's.

Now WE ARE READY.—Our new self-inking Job Press was received on last Tuesday, and, having a first-rate assortment of Job Type of the latest and best styles already on hand, we are now able to compete with any office for first-class work. After looking at our specimens and hearing our prices, we feel assured that no one will feel disposed to send their job work elsewhere to be printed. We insure satisfaction, and have the necessary material and outfit to warrant us in making this assertion.

In every other business, we believe, a person can make one article take the place of another, that is, if he has not what he actually needs, and with which he could do better work by having, he can generally make something else take its place and do tolerably well, but in the printer's trade there is none of these advantages. You have got to have type, plenty of it, too, and of the right sort, as well as a press, or you cannot do satisfactory work. This is why so many country offices cannot do better job work than they do—they barely have enough material to run a newspaper, and, of course, cannot be expected to do good job work, no matter how fine a workman he may be. Our pamphlet work will compare favorably with that done by any steam press in the State, and why? Because we are about as well prepared for that class of work as they, with the exception of speed, which is really not essential to good work. The Magazine published by us, "The Chi-Phi Quarterly," (an eighty page periodical) will place in competition with any Magazine work done in the State, especially for hand press work. We mention these facts for the information of our own citizens as well as others, so that when they want their work done at a first-class office they need not think they will have to send it from home to find one.

REMEMBER that if you want a good Sewing Machine, at a low price, that you will consult your own interest in calling at the ENQUIRER office before buying.

OUR NOBLE GOVERNOR.—We have at our office for sale a few copies of a very fine Lithographic Portrait, 14x 18 inches, of Gov. Zeb. Vance, which is pronounced by all to be an excellent likeness of our worthy Governor, and which should be in the home of every citizen of the State. The price is remarkably low for a work of this class, being sold at only 50 cents. Sent post-paid anywhere on receipt of price. Address ENQUIRER OFFICE, Monroe, N. C.

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS WILL BUY A BOTTLE of Shriner's Indian Vermifuge, the most reliable agent in destroying and expelling worms from children and adults. Try it. Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

FINE RYE.—Mr. Wm. S. Stephenson, of Pleasant Grove, sent us in two bunches of rye that is certainly hard hard to beat for prolificacy. Each bunch grew from only one grain; one has 133 stalks, the other 106.

YOUNG MEN'S PRAYER MEETING.—Our attention has been called to the prosperity of the young men's prayer meeting of Pleasant Grove Church. It was organized by Rev. T. H. Edwards in August, 1875, and has been successfully carried on ever since. They have meetings every Sabbath, and, for the convenience of families and older persons, they very often meet at private residences instead of at the Church; in fact, nearly all their meetings are held at residences.

These meetings have always been well attended, proper attention given them, and a great good has been accomplished. We have been promised some letters for publication, which will more fully describe their workings, which we will take pleasure in publishing, because we believe it will be a benefit to our readers. We regret to say that too little attention is paid to sincere religious worship in this day and time. The world is run wild for the sake of gaining riches, forgetting that important injunction: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

WHAT OTHER PEOPLE SAY OF ALON ROSE.—Capt. John Woodhouse, Editor of the "Concord Register," in a recent number of that paper, says: "We have just returned from a laboring rustication of two weeks, at the brick town of Monroe. We noted closely its pleasant peculiarities, and its flourishing goodheadiness, and do not hesitate to say that for energy, perseverance, and industry coupled with a free, full souled generosity it has few equals and no superiors. In these days of hard times, there are signs of vigor even in mercantile circles, that declares that the shadow of mercantile death does not hang over her. The merchants advertise in their flourishing county journals, with a continuous regularity that keeps the trade of every section round about attracted there. There is a new Bank building in the process of erection, and one or two large store houses going up there, that will be fine edifices. Our business there was patting Mr. John Shate & Sons' woolen machinery in thorough condition for the ensuing season's wool carding. We succeeded splendidly in making a start, carded about five hundred pounds of as handsome rolls as was ever done in the nation. The proprietors of this establishment are generous, accommodating and liberal men, and deserve by reason of their own good qualities, and the superiority of their machinery, and will command an extensive trade. We like Monroe for it has many virtues and comparatively few vices. She has a generous people, handsome girls, and gallant young men, and a genial healthy prosperity that makes both old and young warm and attractive friends."

The News from Jacksonham.
July 6th, 1877.

The weather is fine and crops are growing fast, and the farmers are in good heart. It really seems as if we were going to live again in prosperity, since we have gotten under a good State government. We think our noble Hampton the best Governor in America. Radicalism is played out entirely in this section.

The young men of Jacksonham have organized an Independent Social Temperance Club, which is thought to be one of the best organizations of the kind ever introduced. Already a goodly number have joined, and many more are expected to join soon. We extend the invitation to all, male and female, old and young. Come in and help us to carry out the principles of the "dry ticket," if our neighbors did fail to carry it at the ballot box. We and they can get relief in this way. The ladies are especially requested to join, as they wield a mighty influence that will aid us in getting the membership of the wayward ones.

OBITUARY.

Died, in Monroe, N. C., June the 27th, 1877, Miss NANCY MORROW, in her 20th year.
She had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for sixteen years. Her time on earth was short, but the most of it was spent in the Church of Christ. She was an obedient child to parents, and a most devoted wife and mother. Her last hours were of great suffering. She was delicious so that she could not tell of her prospects for the better land; yet her life was enough to give weeping friends the assurance of her rest in heaven. She leaves an infant, a devoted husband, parents, sisters, relations and friends to mourn her death. May all meet her in heaven, where the family circle will never be broken up.
O. J. B.

Mr. JAMES MOODY, departed this life in Lancaster County, South Carolina, on the 20th day of June 1877, aged about seventy years. Our old friend had raised a large family of children to be men and women, but they had all preceded him to the grave except one daughter. He had been a member of the Baptist Church for many years, and though very reserved and unpretending in his profession, was nevertheless very decided in his Christian character. He had struggled long and hard with the cares and hardships of life, death to him was therefore a welcome messenger and kindly released him of his earthly burden, and transported his ransomed spirit to its home in the upper temple, where no doubt loved ones were waiting to welcome him home.

The services of a first-class Band of Music, have been secured to add to the pleasures already enumerated. A special car will be provided for the Ladies, into which none others will be admitted, save their husbands or escorts. They will thus be rid of any possible annoyance that might be occasioned by lively boys. Good order will positively be enforced, and any one conducting themselves in an unbecoming manner, will lay themselves liable to immediate ejection from the Train. A Refreshment Car will be attached, where Ice Cream, Lemonade, Lunches, &c., can be procured. A baggage car will also be attached for the accommodation of those who wish to carry trunks, &c. Gentlemen wishing to take their whole family, can make special arrangements with the Managers for a Family Ticket. This train is run exclusively for the white people. After remaining a day and a half or two days at Henry's, the train will return to Hickory and remain a day or so. The time-table and rates of fare will be published next week. TO RATIONAL INVALIDS.—In sickness every portion of the body sympathizes with the seat of the disorder. When the stomach fails to perform its functions, the liver, bowels, nerves, muscles, veins, arteries, &c., are all more or less affected. These derangements require a medicine, combining the properties of a stomachic, an aperient, a purgative, a tonic, and sedative to bring them back to their duty; and all these elements, in their purest and most effective forms, are united in Tarrant's Eminent Sarsaparilla. The great Sarsaparilla for Indigestion, and its concomitant consequences. Sold by all Druggists.

Farm and Household.

Dry or Sleepy Food for Cows.

A Young Dairyman asks if it is best, in feeding ground feed, such as corn meal, oat-meal, or bran, to give it dry, or in a thin slop; whether drinking a large amount of water on account of the food in it will injure the cow's digestion.

Reply.—There are different opinions upon this subject. Some contend that it is better to give all the food in a dry state, so as to cause better mastication before swallowing, and thus mixing the saliva with it, which is a digestive fluid. Others think it a good plan to get a cow to drink largely of water, and that making the water rich in food will cause them to do this more large than when they drink the water alone. Grass is 75 to 80 per cent water, and this is the normal food of the cow—so that Nature furnishes a large proportion of water. We think it depends much upon the condition of the food given whether it is better fed dry or wet. Very finely ground meal, which does not require further mastication, may be fed in a thin slop; but this would be better mixed with a little cut hay, so as to carry it with the coarse fodder to the rumen and thus give it the masticating process of that stomach, as, afterwards being raised and remasticated with the fodder, a more perfect digestion occurs. But, if the grain is coarsely ground, or is whole, or in the form of coarse bran, it is better dry, unless mixed with hay—in which case, the hay is masticated so that the ground feed will adhere to it, and be masticated with it. We think generally, that it is quite as well, when grain is to be fed alone, to give it dry. But where the food will almost dissolve in water—such as oil-meal—we have known cows to increase much in milk by giving one pound per day of this food, dissolved in several gallons of water. We know one dairyman who makes a practice of giving a pound of oil-meal per day to each cow, and letting them sip of it whenever they choose. He thinks this increases the yield of milk enough to pay several times for the oil-meal.—National Live Stock Journal.

MANURING THE PEACH.—The majority of planters think peach trees will thrive and bear annual crops without being fed. They can with just as good reason think they can live themselves without eating. One or two crops deplete the land and we must restore that has been taken away, or the trees cannot bear any crops. Annual manuring is just as necessary as cultivation, and the two will almost ensure a crop of fruit. Barnyard manure, bone and potash are all good. I believe potash is the best food for the peach. Many of the super phosphates are good. Peruvian guano is too stimulating. We are using this spring a preparation of "bone and potash," about 300 pounds per acre. For vegetable matter a good plan is to seed the orchard in rye in September and plough it under the following May. The peach must have food, and the more we give it, the better fruit we will have. Fruit Recorder.

CUTTING GRASS.—Chemical analysis and common experience has proven that grass cut when in blossom is better for cows than when cut later. For horses and working cattle it is better when more nearly ripe, but not woody. As a rule farmers dry hay too much. Cured grass is far better every way; cheaper to make, and better feed. Grass cut in the morning and shaken up once or twice in a good hay day, is cured enough as a rule, to be carried to the barn in the afternoon. With a good mowing machine to do the work quickly time may be saved by not cutting until the dew is off. Or the same result will be obtained by late cutting in the afternoon, the grass lying flat prevents the dew from getting to the ground, and only the top is moistened.—Scientific Farmer.

"By their Works ye shall know Them."

The Irishman who thought the druggist staidy because the emetic was so small, is only surprised in his paranoias delirium by those who persistently adhere to the use of those nauseating, disgusting large and drastic pills, while Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, which are sugar-coated, and a little larger than mustard seeds, will, by their steady and gentle action on the liver, correct all torpidity, thus permanently overcoming constipation. In South America they have almost entirely superseded all other pills, and are relied on fully by the people, and often used as preventive of the various affections of the stomach, liver, and bowels, so prevalent in that climate. Pierce's Pocket Memorandum Books are given away at drug-stores.

Dear Sir—I write to inform you that I have used your Pellets for some time, and find them to be the best medicine that I ever used. I have also used your Favorite Prescription in my family with entire satisfaction. I have seen your People's Common Sense Medical Adviser and I think it is the best thing that I have ever seen.
