Never Prove False to a Friend.

Never prove false to a friend. In love and friendship be true; Never prove false to a friend. So long as he's faithful to you.

He may be dishonest; a knave In other's opinion; but when To you he is generous and kind, And ever true to the noblest of men.

Is any man free from each fault? All righteous and good in his way? He has a weakness no perfect man earth That can be named but in praise?

Never speak ill of a friend. To gossip keep closed your ears; An excellent rule in the main Is to credit one tenth you hear.

Stand by a friend in distress. When you know he is really in need; What matters it if he fails; There is honor in you in the deed.

That one may deserve you his foe. Then his, not yours the disgrace. Because we find one man untrue Shall we strive to disturb the whole race?

Give him honor, where honor is due. So long as he is faithful to you.

MIRABILE DICTU.

BY LENA LILLIAN, OF OLIN, N. C.

In the darkness of night, while gazing upon the vast clock-work of stars, I became somewhat intoxicated by curiosity—the bane of old mother Eve. I thought I would take a stroll through the stary world to see for myself whether or not what astronomers tell us is true. So, to carry my resolution into effect, I wrapped about me my mantle of gas, and sped away into the aerial region. On and on I went, until I paused to consider what I had undertaken—whether or not I could possibly reach Earth again before the sable of night would give way to dawn; and whether or not, my destiny being reached, I could ever return. I turned me round, and looked upon our dear old Earth, and then upon the beautifully illuminated worlds above me. "No," said I, "I will not retrace, but keep on. If it be impossible for me to get back, I shall dwell in yonder cities of light," for I knew there must be some there.

The first planet I wished to visit was Jupiter; so, I acted accordingly, and doubled my power of flight until I thought I saw land. A few more paces confirmed my conjecture, for I had indeed arrived at a beautiful city. The grandeur superseded anything I had ever seen, or even imagined. I was, in fact, afraid to enter its seemingly half-way prospects; for I thought I must be Heaven itself—none other could look so lovely. I passed in the suburbs of this charming place. Feeling wearied by my lengthened flight, I sat me upon a rustic seat by a little rippling brook. The soft, mellow light of Jupiter's moon, falling on the water, and ever again [unclear] me so beautiful, acted like a charm—so I most naturally fell into a reverie. I had been sitting there for some time—I knew not how long, for I was too much bewildered to keep space with the hours; and so perfectly delighted that time seemed divided into seconds only, when the current of my thoughts was impeded by a long-drawn sigh, which seemed to come from the recess of some heart almost ready to crush. I looked about me but could see nothing. I again heard the faintly audible words, "Oh, my God!" I again looked, the blood almost frozen in my veins, and to my consternation I beheld beneath the branches of a willow which gracefully swept the water's edge, the lineage of a human form. I arose to see more clearly, and as I did so, the rustling of my clothing attracted her attention. She arose, her golden tresses falling with natural grace about her delicately rounded shoulders, and raising her soft blue eyes, looked at me in perfect silence. I wondered if she were not a Peri, banished from the gates of Paradise, and if so would like the one of old Eve to regain her former possession. While I thus conjectured, she stepped forward and gently stroked my shoulders. "Are you a resident of this Jupiter, or are you from some of the aerial regions?"—in either case, can I trust to you my tale of sorrow?" The word sorrow struck like mortal discord—lady, that this is a heart of our own sex? It is, indeed, and so cruel as that of Nero. In the midst of that merriment is one I love—my, adore! She has foiled me—robbed me of my future bliss! Will it be a crime in Heaven, to love as I do him? This inhuman heart has slandered my character, which the angels in Heaven know is stainless; and under her borrowed robe of purity, to all appearances, won his heart, but I know I possess it. He is too noble, and of too faultless origin, to take to himself any but a pure woman; hence, while he believes me an alien, he will never claim me as his wife. My fate is sealed! Oh, God, I shall die! Will you go with me to this place of revelry?"

Wishing to see something of the customs of this people, which I was vain-glorious enough to boast was my own discovery, I assented, and we walked along with hurried steps until we came within the vestibule of this magnificent structure. My eyes were dazzled with the sight. I had never seen anything of half such grandeur. The floors were carpeted with folds of pure white velvet, delicately tinted with gold, while the windows were handsomely draped with silken tissues—

Something About Dogs.

FAYETTEVILLE, April, 1879.

EDITOR OBSERVER:—From Col. Polk's Hand Book of North Carolina we learn that 112,147 dogs were reported in 79 of the 64 counties of the State last year. The counties of Bladen, Beaufort, Carteret, Edgemont, Halifax, Duplin, Johnston, Warren, Mecklenburg, Gaston, Surry, Jackson, York and Lincoln, 15 of the best dog counties in the State, made no returns to the Agricultural Department of their canine population.

As these counties contain over one-sixth of the population of the State, it is certainly fair to credit them with at least one sixth of the dog population, the 112,147 representing the other five-sixths. This would give us, at a low estimate, 134,576 dogs in the entire State. Now, suppose that each one of these dogs eats but three cents worth (the value of a postage stamp) at a meal, a small allowance, truly, for a healthy cure, the cost of maintaining one dog for twelve months, allowing him three meals a day, is $32.85 a year, and the State of North Carolina pay annually for the board of her 134,576 dogs the handsome sum of $4,419,816 60, besides the value of 34,000 sheep which they annually destroy, worth at least $68,000 more.

Just think of it, the people of the State are taxed for this low estimate, annually nearly four millions and a half to support property that does not yield one cent of revenue, and is not regarded by those who take tax lists as property at all.

But these figures do not tell half the story. It would require a dog of a very delicate constitution to live on three cents a meal, and continue to him the privilege of devouring all the unadressed mutton he finds lying about in the woods, and your dog would cost $43.80 a year besides his rations. The dogs of the State would then require with their rations, which they are bound to eat or die, $5,962,000 a year to support them.

Just think of it! Nearly six millions of dollars a year spent to maintain the dogs of the State. Here is a leak of much vaster proportions than that caused by the outside lunatics, or all our railroad appropriations and high salaries of officials.

But you say these estimates are not fair. The dogs eat only the scraps and potato peelings which would otherwise be thrown away. By no means. The same scraps and potato peelings, which it takes to keep in reputable condition a pet dog, will raise and fatten two respectable hogs, without any tax on the owner. I've tried both and know whereof I speak.

Now let us look at these figures again. Take the first estimate, $4,419,816 60, the cost of maintaining the dogs of North Carolina for one year at 3 cents a meal. This would purchase over fifty-five million pounds of bacon at 8 cents a pound. It would pay for more than half of all the cotton raised in the State at 10 cents a pound; it is more than all the wheat, buckwheat and barley raised in the State last year would come to at the present market prices. It divided up between the ninety-four counties of the State it would give to each county a school fund of $46,500. If half the dogs were dead, we could raise in their stead on the same food 135,000 hogs and save annually to the State 17,000 sheep half the number now destroyed by dogs. Surely we could kill half and then have enough left to look after the foxes and wolves and other enemies of domestic animals. Sixty-seven thousand dogs—seven hundred and thirteen to a county—ought to be enough to do us.

But where shall we begin to thin out and whose dog must die? Let the owners themselves determine this. Let the dog be taxed as other property, and let the valuation be at least as much as it costs to feed him for twelve months at three cents a meal, and in less than twelve months half of our canine population will disappear from the face of the earth.

A better plan perhaps, would be to offer a premium of $5 apiece for dog skins. The State could better afford to do this than to lose the wool and the support of 269,000 hogs. The tanners and glove-makers would probably buy the dog skins and a new industry might be created in the State. Why not authorize the Agricultural Department to pay a premium of $5 apiece for fresh dog skins? "People would then go to raising dogs for their hides?" No, this might be prevented by limiting the time to one or two years. It would not be a bad idea for our agricultural societies to offer their premiums to the man who would place on exhibition the largest number of dog skins collected in any one county. This would be encouraging sheep raising in a practical way, and many a worthless cur would lie down and yield up his hide for a premium of 50 or $1. Down with the dogs, and up with the sheep.—N. B. Cobb, in the Observer.

A River on Fire.

At 11 o'clock yesterday, people in the city opposite Blackwell's Island, saw a big cloud of smoke rising behind the workhouse, and it looked as if the place was afire. Hunter's Point, on inquiry, appeared to be responsible for the spectacle. The oil refined there and prepared for the foreign markets comes in considerable quantities over the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad and is carried from the railroad depot to the tanks at Hunter's Point through a pipe. It is forced through by expansion, the exhaust engines and machinery being at Hunter's Point. The pipe is at the bottom of the East River, which it crosses a short distance below the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island. About 11 o'clock yesterday the island officials saw what looked like a vigorous water-spout. The water rose high up in the air and fell in graceful showers all around. This was about half way between the southern extremity of Blackwell's Island and Ravenswood. In a very short time, the surface of the channel was covered with oil which naturally spreads rapidly on the surface of water, and which was carried down stream, also by the ebbing tide. This explained the unusual phenomenon. The oil pipe had burst at the bottom of the river, and the oil was flowing in a big stream to the surface. Several little boys who were playing around the old Harlem Railroad dock in Ravenswood, opposite the Workhouse, noticed the oil and promptly threw some lighted matches into the river. The oil ignited, and in a few moments the whole river front was ablaze, and the dock also caught fire. The boys ran away rather more scared than happy. They were seen from the Island. The fire engines were sent for as quick as possible. Three responded. The fire on the dock, in rear of which are gas works, was quickly extinguished, and in about a quarter of an hour there was no appearance of fire on the river. But just as the firemen were about to leave, the flames shot up here and there along the channel, and they came back and began the extraordinary task—to extinguish an oil fire on the water. It is credibly alleged that they tried to do this by pumping water into the river. At any rate they were unsuccessful; the streams which they poured into the river possibly to break up the continuity of the flaming surface merely stirred up the blaze. Now and then fanned by fitful gusts of wind they lengthened the channel and swept the fences and trees along the river front scorching them here and there. It was during this second outbreak that the spectacle was at its best, though daylight spoiled it a good deal. The river for upwards of a mile beyond the old Harlem Railroad dock and away across to midstream was all sprays of flame lapping upwards into a black cloud of smoke. Thousands of people on the hills of Ravenswood and Astoria came out to see the sight, but New Yorkers got a look at nothing but the smoke.

making lumber from straw. A gentleman from Bushnell, Illinois, recently exhibited some samples of lumber which have attracted much attention among the lumbermen, and which, it possesses all the virtues that are claimed for it, is one of the most important inventions of its kind ever brought to notice. If it has success it will form a new era in the art of building. To make hard wood lumber out of common wheat straw, with all effects of polish and finish which is obtained on the hardest of black walnut and mahogany, at as little cost as clear pine lumber can be made up for is certainly wonderful. Such are the claims of the inventor for the strawboard lumber which he has been exhibiting in this city, and the samples which he produces would go far toward verifying his claims. The process of manufacturing is as follows:

He takes ordinary straw-board, such as is usually manufactured at any paper mill, for the purpose. As many sheets are taken as required to make the thickness of lumber desired. These sheets are passed through a chemical solution which thoroughly softens up the fiber and completely saturates it. The whole is then passed through a succession of rollers, dried and hardened during the passage, as well as polished and then comes out of the other end of the machine hard, dry lumber, ready for use. The inventor claims that the chemical properties hardening in the fiber entirely prevent water soaking, and render the lumber combustible only in a very hot fire. The hardened finish on the outside also makes it impervious to water. The samples on exhibition could hardly be told from hard harty wood, but in sawing it the difference could not be detected. It is susceptible of a very high polish, and samples of imitation of marble, mahogany, etc, were shown which might deceive the most experienced. Not only does he claim a substitute for lumber in sash, doors and blinds and finishing stuff, but also a substitute for black walnut and other woods in the manufacture of all kinds of furniture, coffin, etc, and also an excellent substitute for marble-top tables, mantle-pieces, bureaus, etc. He claims that it will not warp in the least.—Oshkosh Northwestern.

Why, Verily!

Why, Verily!—Why be an animated fellow-shop when Allan's Anti-Fat is a safe and sure remedy for obesity, or corpulency, and will reduce the most ill-proportioned form to a graceful outline within a few weeks. It contains no ingredients that can possibly prove deleterious to the system. A well-known chemist, after examining its constituents and the method of its preparation, gives it his unqualified endorsement as a remedy that "cannot but act favorably upon the system and is well calculated to attain the object for which it is intended."

Drawing a Crowd.

Yesterday a man stepped out in the street in front of the Hotel, and began to look up at one of the fourth story windows with an opera glass. A man coming out of the hotel observed him, walked out into the street, and looked up to see what was the matter. Then a policeman meandered leisurely up, shaded his eyes with his hand and eyed the window intently. Three or four clerks from the adjoining stores saddled out and joined the knot in the street. A man with cart of peanuts drove alongside and halted. Pedestrians stopped, inquired what it was and directed their attention to the mysterious window. By this time small boys were reinforcing the group from every direction; the crowd almost blocked the way; windows across the street were thrown up and curious faces peered out; a subdued murmur arose as the people swayed to and fro. Everybody wanted to know what was the matter and somebody started the rumor that T—, the clerk of the hotel, had laid a wager that he could walk from the window and and roll a wheelbarrow on a rope to be stretched across the street. The man with the opera glass gazed fixedly at the window, intermitting now and then to wipe his glass with his handkerchief. The crowd began to get restless. The man with the peanuts had sold out his stock. Then the man with the opera glass jumped up into the wagon and took a seat beside the man without the peanuts. The twain looked around and smiled, bowed their thanks for their liberal patronage, and the man with the opera glass, content with the sale his partner of the peanuts had made, had the impudence to arise and offer his opera glass to the highest bidder. Whether he sold it with this chronicle cannot say, for with the majority of the assemblage, he stuck his hands into his pockets and silently strolled away.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Veto of the Army Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The Army appropriation bill was returned to the House to-day without the Presidential signature, accompanied by a message stating at length the reasons for the veto. The President says that if the bill contained no other provisions than those for the support of the army, it would receive his prompt approval, but it includes further legislation and involves questions of the gravest character. He recites the status now in force, embodied in sections 2,002 and 5,528 of the Revised Statutes, and says the adoption of the proposed amendment may be considered in two aspects: First, as it affects the rights of the United States government to use military force to keep peace at elections, second as it affects the rights of the government, by civil authority, to protect elections from violence and fraud. He then quotes and calls attention to sections 2,003, 5,529, 5,530, 5,531 and 5,532 of the Revised Statutes, and section 15 of the army appropriation bill passed June 18, 1873, together with remarks upon the purpose and effect of the latter as stated in the speech of the Senators and Representatives who support it. From these laws he says, it appears that there can be no military interference with elections and that, consequently, there is no necessity for the enactment of section 6 of this bill. He then calls attention to the existing laws for the prevention of discriminations on account of race, color or previous condition or servitude, and to punish fraud, violence and intimidation at Federal elections, and says: "These laws, it is the duty of the executive department of the government to enforce. The intent and effect of the 6th section of this bill is to prohibit all civil officers of the United States, under penalty of fine and imprisonment, from employing any adequate civil force for this purpose at a place where their enforcement is most necessary, namely: at places where congressional elections are held. If the proposed legislation should become a law, there will be no power vested in any officer of the government to protect from violence officers of the United States engaged in the discharge of their duties. Their rights and duties, under the law, will remain but the national government will be powerless to enforce its own statutes. The States may employ both military and civil power to keep peace and to enforce laws at State elections. It is proposed to deny to the United States even the necessary civil authority to protect national elections. No sufficient reason has been given for this discrimination in favor of State and against national authority."

With regard to the manner in which it is sought to repeal the law authorizing the use of troops at the polls, he says: "The object aimed at is altogether foreign to the purpose of an army appropriation bill. The practice of tacking to appropriation bills a measure not pertinent to such bills did not prevail until more than forty years after the adoption of the constitution. It has become the practice of all parties, when in power, to have adopted it, and many abuses and great waste of public money have, in this way, crept into appropriation bills. The public opinion of the country is against it. States which have recently adopted constitutions, have generally provided a remedy for the evil, by enacting that no law shall contain more than one object, which, shall be plainly expressed in its title. The constitutions of more than half of the States contain substantially this provision. The public welfare will be promoted in many ways by a return to the early practice of the government and to the true principle of legislation which requires that every measure shall stand or fall according to its own merits."

He says: "This Congress has ample opportunity and time to pass the appropriation bills, and also to enact any political measures which may be determined upon in separate bills by the usual and orderly methods of proceeding. But a majority of both houses have deemed it wise to adhere to the principle maintained in the last Congress by the majority of the House of Representatives, namely: That the House of Representatives has the sole right to originate bills for raising revenue, and therefore has the right to withhold appropriations upon which the existence of the government may depend unless the Senate and President shall give their assent to any legislation which the House may see fit to attach to appropriation bills. To establish this principle is to make a radical, dangerous and unconstitutional change in the character of our institutions. That a majority of the Senate now concurs in the claim of the House, adds to the gravity of the situation, but does not alter the question at issue. The new doctrine, if maintained, will result in the consolidation of unchecked and despotic power in the House of Representatives. A bare majority of the House will become the government, the executive will no longer be what the framers of the constitution intended—an equal and independent branch of the government. The principle of this bill places not merely the Senate and executive, but the judiciary also under the coercion and dictation of the House. The House alone will be the judge of what constitutes a grievance and also of the means and measure of redress. An act of Congress to protect elections is now a grievance complained of, but the House may, on the same principle determine that a treaty made by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, an nomination or appointment to office, or a decision or opinion of the Supreme Court, is a grievance, and that the measure of redress is to withhold the appropriations required for the support of the offending branch of the government. "Believing that this bill is a dangerous violation of the spirit and meaning of the constitution, I am compelled to return it to the House, in which it originated, without my approval."

Queen Victoria's Abdication.

Rumors of a vague but somewhat alarming character have been current for some days with regard to the health of the Queen, but they have become so persistent that it would be needless longer to ignore their existence. It is said that for some time Her Majesty's health has not been in a very satisfactory state. The death of the Duchess of Hesse gave her a shock from which she has not recovered, and the fatigue incident on the celebration of the marriage of the Duke of Connaught exercised a depressing influence on her health. The journey to Italy is not a mere holiday trip. Sir W. Jenner considered that a change of scene and an almost entire absence from official duty of any kind were necessary for the Queen, and this is the reason why she has buried herself on the secluded shores of an Italian lake. It is no doubt, in consequence of the somewhat gloomy state of her constitutional and mental health which are passing in society that other reports connected with the succession to the throne are also current. It is said that unless a considerable change in Her Majesty's health takes place she will no longer be able to discharge the functions which belong to the sovereign of the country, and, rumor points to the possibility of an abdication. It is an undoubted fact since the departure of the Queen for Italy the prime minister has several times seen the Prince of Wales. On Tuesday he had an interview with his royal highness of more than an hour's duration, and the prince would seem to be since to some extent discharging the duties of the Queen with regard to public affairs during her absence in Italy. In a matter where there is necessarily a good deal of speculation it would be idle to make definite statements, but there are those who think that a somewhat startling surprise is in store for Parliament before the present session closes.—London Cor. Dundee Advertiser.

Conviction of Poindexter.

RICHMOND, Va., April 25.—In the Hastings Court this morning the jury in the case of John E. Poindexter, charged with the murder of Chas. C. Curtis here on March 3, brought in a verdict of voluntary manslaughter, and assessed the punishment of the prisoner at two years' confinement in the penitentiary. Poindexter was told to stand up and hear the verdict of the jury. When James of Alexandria, the foreman pronounced the verdict the accused burst into tears. He sat down leaning his head upon the desk of the bar, and cried in a suppressed tone for fifteen or twenty minutes. His three brothers who have been in constant attendance with him during the two trials, were affected to tears also. When the verdict of the jury was announced, on motion of prisoner's counsel sentence was suspended by the court until Monday next, in order to allow them time to decide whether a new trial will be asked for. The defense prepared a number of bills of exception during the progress of the trial. If a new trial is asked and not granted, the case will be carried to the Court of Appeals. It is stated that a majority of the jury have already expressed a willingness to sign an appeal for executive clemency in event that a new trial is obtained.—Baltimore Sun.

The Western North Carolina Railroad.

Maj. J. S. W. Wilson president of the Western North Carolina Railroad, arrived in this city last evening and has rooms in the National Hotel. The progress of the road is quite satisfactory. The cars are running to the eastern approach of the Swannanoa tunnel; track laying is going ahead quite rapidly on the western slope, and in a short time passenger cars will be running on the other side of the Blue Ridge in the direction of Asheville. Summer travel to the mountains this summer will be by rail across the Blue Ridge for the first time in the history of our State, and every accommodation and facility for the enjoyment of the magnificent mountain scenery of Western North Carolina will be afforded from the cars of the Western North Carolina Railroad. Open cars like those used on the centennial grounds at Philadelphia, are being built for the mountain section of the road, and a trip to the mountains has never been so enjoyable as the coming summer promises.—Ral. Observer 26th.

The Juror's Test Oath.

While Congress is passing measures to secure the repeal of the iniquitous Test Oath law for jurors in Federal Courts, the Supreme Court of the United States declares the act unconstitutional. This is one of the most righteous decisions of that Court which only a few years ago was not a bulwark of liberty, but an accomplice in party usurpation and despotism. The Court however in a number of opinions has given evidence that it has not lost its judicial character. The country can now look to it with reasonable expectation of securing justice in final resort.

Important Decision.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The following important case was decided in the U. S. Supreme Court to-day; Geo. Burt and Maria M. Poniaud, and the Circuit Court of Florida; judgment affirmed. In this case, one of the assignments of error in the court below brought up the question of juror's disqualification on account of participation in the rebellion, and the constitutionality of the juror's Test Oath Act. The Court held, in an opinion by Justice Miller, that a juror is not more obliged than a witness is, to state on oath, as a condition of qualification, his guilt or innocence of a crime which would render him infamous. Whether pardoned by a general amnesty or not, the crime of treason is one which a juror cannot be required to disclose in this manner. If he be guilty, his challengers must prove it by other competent testimony. In a separate concurring opinion, Justice Fields gave his views as follows: "I agree with the Court that Mr. Holmes, in this case, could not be required to answer the questions put to him, but I go further: I do not think that the act of Congress, which, by requiring the test oath as a past conduct, excludes a great majority of citizens of half of the country from the jury box, is valid. In my judgment the act is not only oppressive and odious, and repugnant to the spirit of our institutions, but is clearly unconstitutional and void. As a measure, to be enforced in insurgent States when dominated by national foes, the act could be sustained, but after the war was over and the insurgent States were restored to their normal and constitutional relations to the Union, it was as much out of the place and as inoperative as would be a law quartering a soldier in every Southern man's home."

Imprisoned Miners Rescued.

LIVING UNDERGROUND FOUR DAYS ON THE FLESH OF MULE.
PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—A Wilkesbarre special says: "The efforts to rescue the men imprisoned in the mine at No. 10 slope have proved successful. At 9 o'clock this morning the men were reached and all taken out alive and well but suffering much from exhaustion and want of food. They were imprisoned over four days. A relief of laborers have been constantly at work night and day and finally these succeeded in making a channel through a fifty-foot block of coal. The imprisoned men had built a fire and sustained themselves on the meat of a mule which was caught with them in the fall. A stream of water running through the mine quenched their thirst. They were found in good condition, having suffered very little from their confinement."

Bold Attempt at Robbing a Bank.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 30.—A bold but unsuccessful attempt was made to-day to rob the Workingmen's Savings Bank on Ohio street, Allegheny, the kookkeeper of the bank, had gone to dinner leaving the cashier, Geo. L. Walter, alone. Two men entered the bank and one of them advancing to the rear counter asked silver for a dollar bill, when the cashier advanced with the change in his hand he was confronted with a cocked revolver and told to make no noise or he would be shot. Dropping the silver, Walter seized the revolver and succeeded in wrenching it from his assailant, who then climbed up and got inside, and reaching for the money on the counter, when Walter opened fire on him, firing two shots at him, and also two at the other robber who in the meantime had climbed over the front counter and was advancing to the rear of the room. The strangers dismayed by their warlike reception then fled and have not yet been arrested. The bank sustained no loss.

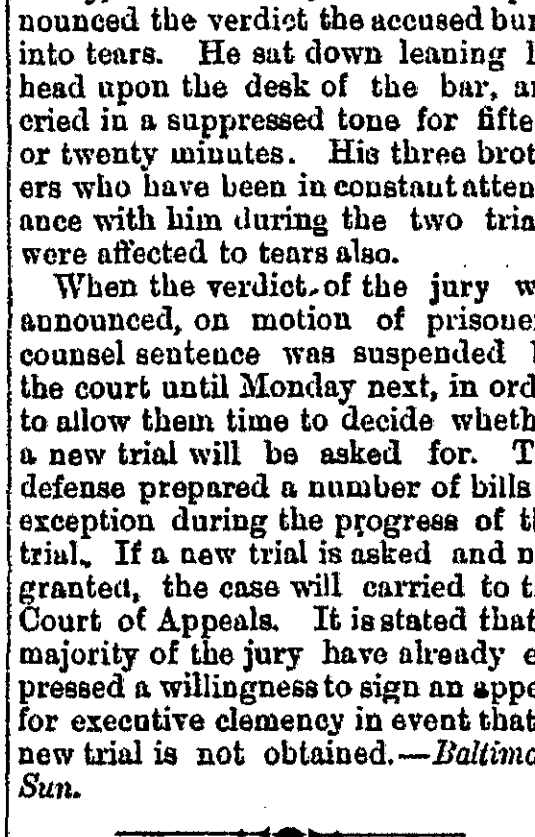

Drought in Texas.

The Dallas Herald says the drought in that State covers all that portion of Texas lying upon a line of Denison and San Antonio, including every county west of it, and an average of two tiers east. In portions of this territory people are hauling water for drinking purposes from three to six miles, and the cattle depend upon the larger streams, all of which are lower than can be remembered. On many plantations the wheat is not more than one foot high, and is heading out. Farmers are holding back for rain before planting cotton, as it would be labor lost to sow seed. Fears are entertained of a famine in corn and oats, and hence the price of the old crop of corn is advancing with nearly every one holding on to all they have. So far the vegetables are nearly a total failure. The Dallas market at no time this spring has shown scarcely any at all. The supply is getting less and less every day.

A Threatened Call to Arms.

Within the past few days there has been at Washington some talk with which the nimble pistol was not wholly dissociated, and this, too, among the dignitaries. The long and the short of it is that Mr. Lowe, Greenback member of the House from Alabama, recently informed a newspaper reporter that Illinois soldiers in the Confederate service had told him that their companies were raised as part of a command which Gen. John A. Logan (now one of the Senators from Illinois) was to have had in the Confederate service. The reporter of course printed the story and Gen. Logan denied it, using offensive language. Mr. Lowe invited him to go out of the District of Columbia and settle the matter, which invitation the General declined, whereupon Mr. Lowe published the correspondence, and said: "I will not brand John A. Logan as a liar, for he is a Senator of the United States. I will not post him as a scoundrel and poltroon, for that would be in violation of the local statutes. But I do publish him as one who knows how to insult but not how to satisfy a gentleman, and I invoke upon him the judgement of the honorable men of the community."

Trial of Judge Elliot's Assassin.

FRANKFORT, April 28.—The special term of the Criminal Court called for the trial of Thomas Buford, the murderer of Judge John M. Elliott, convened here this morning with Judge O. D. McManama on the bench. A grand jury composed of some of the best citizens of the city and county was impaneled and the Judge delivered to it an eloquent charge. About 2:30 the Grand Jury appeared in court and presented an indictment against Thomas Buford for murder in the first degree. The trial will begin to-morrow, when the defense will be conducted by George M. Gurtis, of New York, assisted by General Jno. B. Houston and Colonel John A. Prall, of Lexington, while the prosecution will be conducted by the Commonwealth's attorney, Warren Monfort, assisted by Col. W. C. Breckenridge, Phil. B. Thompson, Sr., and General John Rodman. Gen. A. Buford and Major Henry Buford, brothers of the murderer, are doing all in their power for him, and it is understood that the first move to-morrow, will be to get a change of venue, and when the case is called for trial to endeavor to have it postponed from time to time until it finally wears itself out in the courts.

Cabbage Insects.
The cabbage louse is an insect enemy that appears to be hard to fight. Its forces in reserve are tremendous, and increase in number and power as the season advances; but the damage he is capable of inflicting is very much greater when the plants are young and tender than after attaining size and firmness of texture. A young plantation of cabbages can be ruined in a short time if neglected. My plan in the family garden is to look over the young plants in about ten days or a fortnight after setting and to hold the leaf in one hand and rub it over with the fingers of the other with just sufficient force to destroy the louse and not injure the leaf. Some of the insects will fall to the ground, but by passing the hand roughly over the surface they will be destroyed. This operation is very effectual, but in the course of two weeks the reserve will be up, and with them, perhaps not a few of the green worms (Pieris Rapae). As the leaves are now larger and more of them, a more systematic attack has been planned, and I have found the use of an old tooth-brush of invaluable service. I take each leaf in hand and examine it carefully, passing the brush over it, which dislodges insects, eggs and larvae, and destroys most of them. In this careful examination the green worm will usually be seen, if he has attained much size, but many of the smaller ones will escape the observation of the keenest and most practical eye; but the brush brings them out, they cannot escape it, and having them once on the ground they are easily destroyed. This mode of fighting these insects may appear laborious, but it is not so much really as it may seem, for active person can easily attend to a thousand plants a day. For the ordinary family garden an hour's work every ten days will keep you master of the situation. Perhaps others may suggest something better, but my best weapon is a well used tooth-brush.

Model Farming.
We learn that Mr. Joseph L. Rheim, the farmer par excellence of Craven county, has this Spring under cultivation in garden peas alone 125 acres; these he will gather, and ship in time to seed the same land in cotton, thus making two crops in one season. This is nothing new for Mr. Rheim as he has been successfully engaged in this innovating style of farming for the last eight or ten years. With ordinary success this season, he will clear money enough on his peas, and have it in his pocket, to cultivate the same number of acres in cotton thereby making his cotton crop clear. It seems to us, in this manner of farming there is sense, science, system and money.

Last year Mr. Rheim had besides 75 acres in peas, 50 acres in Irish potatoes, these latter, he dug and shipped in ample time to put the land in cotton. Why can't some of our farmers, who live convenient to Washington, where we presume, they would have no difficulty in procuring labor as needed, go into the trucking business? We are at least two or three weeks in advance of Norfolk in vegetation, and nearly as near the Northern markets in point of time. Trucking has been a pecuniary success around Newbern and Norfolk, why not around Washington?

The want of labor, in localities far removed from towns, where it usually centres, would prove an insurmountable obstacle to successful trucking, but in this immediate vicinity, there is no such drawback to contend with; here labor can be picked up at most any time and upon easy terms. Abandon the exclusive cultivation of cotton, gentlemen and try trucking. Plant a diversity of crops, and rotate. —North State Press.

Broom Corn.—Broom corn should be planted at the same time Indian corn is planted. It requires a richer soil than Indian corn—at least Indian corn will produce a better crop on a less fertile soil than is required for broom corn in consequence of its growing faster, and feeling the effects of fertilizers more perceptibly. Bot on lands on the banks of rivers that are annually overflowed in early spring are particularly adapted to the growth of broom corn. It is sowed in drills, about three feet apart, and the corn thinned-out to stand from four to six apart. Any good upland soil, that consists of a rich mould, easily tilled, will produce an excellent crop of broom corn, with the aid of barn-yard manure or other fertilizers. It requires careful cultivation, by running the cultivator between the rows as soon as the corn is well up; and then the rows require hand weeding and thinning out to the proper distance. Boys and girls can do this work better than men can, and at one-third the expense that it would cost to employ men to do it. No weeds should be permitted to grow, as the value of the crop depends on the cleanness of cultivation. The seed is valuable for fowls, and for every kind of live stock when ground, and some cultivators think that the seed alone is worth the cost of cultivation. —Hot alum water is a recent suggestion as an insecticide. It will destroy red and black ants, cock-roaches, spider chinch-bugs, and all the crawling pests which invest our houses. Take two pounds of alum and dissolve it in three or four quarts of boiling water; let it stand on the fire until the alum disappears, then apply it with a brush while nearly boiling hot to every joint and crevice in your closets, bedsteads, pantry shelves, and the like. —An elevated railroad station is of course station-ary.

POTATO ROT.—The Chemical News ascribes the potato rot to a deficiency of lime and magnesia in the soil. Different observers state the percentage of magnesia in the ash of sound tubers at from five to ten per cent, in the diseased tubers an analysis shows only 3.94 per cent. Analysis of sound tubers show over five per cent of lime; but in the ash of diseased tubers only 1.77 per cent, was found. A similar observation was made some years ago by Professor Thorpe, with regard to diseased and healthy orange trees; in the former there was a deficiency of lime and magnesia.

—Stawberries should have a mulch applied before the fruit gets heavy, to protect the berries from injury by contact with the soil. Cut hay, straw, or leaves are all good, and the one which is most convenient may be used; sawdust should not be used under any circumstances, as it is bad upon the fruit as the earth. If new plants are needed, allow the running to root, if not, cut off as soon as they start, to strengthen the old plant.

Corros Rust.—What causes rust in cotton? Prof. Pendleton of Georgia in his Scientific Agriculture says the different kinds of rust have but one proximate cause, viz, deficient nutrition and this may result from parasitic growths, drought, and the absence of an important element in the fertilizer.

THE GENUINE DR. C. McLANE'S Celebrated American WORM SPECIFIC OR VERMIFUGE.
SYMPOMS OF WORMS.
The countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure sericiform runs along the lower eyelid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fletting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hicough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist, DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE will certainly effect a cure. IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant. The genuine DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.
