

The Monroe Enquirer.

News and Notes.

It is believed that more than one hundred cases of yellow fever are now under treatment in Memphis.

A correspondent of the So. Home suggests the name of Capt. Calvin Grier for Congress, from this District.

Col. B. S. Ford, State Senator from Princess Anne, Md., was drowned at Cape May one day last week while bathing in the surf.

The War Department claims that North Carolina had a total of 3,156 men in the United States army during the late war.

Col. Tom Buford, who has been on trial for the past two weeks for the killing of Judge Elliott, in Ky., has been convicted of murder and sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

It is stated that there is a movement on foot to transfer Judge Settle from Florida to the bench in Washington, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Humphreys.

Judge Noah Davis, on the 19th inst., granted a writ of error in the case of Chastine Cox, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Hull and sentenced to be hung, which was taken before Judge Potter, who thereupon granted a stay of the proceedings in the case.

A report from Fort Ellis says there are four hundred Indians there starving, and the number daily increasing. Three hundred are reported within a few days march of the Fort and are unable to proceed further on account of weakness.

A State exchange says that Senator Blaine and family will arrive at Mrs. Patton's at the foot of Black Mountain, about the first of August, to remain two or three weeks. He will visit Mt. Mitchell, and take a run through the Land of the Sky generally.

It is announced that from information obtained at the executive mansion, there is no doubt of the correctness of the assertion heretofore published in regard to the successor of Secretary McCrary. Ex-Senator Ramsey, of Minnesota, has been tendered the office, and has accepted.

The panic-stricken people of Memphis, Tenn., are fleeing from the pending yellow fever plague by the thousands, leaving property and all behind them. In this grave crisis, two colored military companies of the city, volunteered to protect their property. It is praiseworthy in the highest sense.

Hon. J. P. Benjamin, a Jew, and the greatest lawyer that ever lived, recently died in London. He served in the United States Senate, was a member of the Cabinet of the Confederate States and at the time of his death was a trusted and honored officer of the Queen of England.

The New York World gives a list of persons killed and wounded by the illegal use of pistols and fire crackers in the chief cities in the Union on the last fourth of July. The frightful catalog includes the names of eighteen persons killed outright and 107 wounded.

On 17th inst., Roxabel, Bertie Co., was visited by a fearful wind and hail storm. Numberless trees were uprooted and several miles of fence utterly swept away. A large quantity of cotton was blown up by the roots and carried to neighboring fields. In one orchard 75 fruit trees were blown up and many more badly damaged. Numbers of houses were blown down but no lives lost. At one farm a woman was the only occupant of the dwelling-house, and six out-houses were blown down around her. She was so badly frightened that she fell into a trance and came near being buried alive. Her friends made all the preparations for the funeral and were about to start for the grave when she suddenly revived and declined to attend in the capacity of corpse. This stopped the funeral. Scarcely a chimney in the neighborhood escaped the wind, and several were blown to the roof with such force that they broke through and fell to the first floor. The wind was followed by a violent hail storm which did great damage to the crops, and some of the stones were so heavy that they went entirely through large watermelons and penetrated several inches into the ground. Luckily there were not many of this kind.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OUTLOOK.

The Philadelphia Times takes a telegraphic view at the national political situation, from its independent standpoint, and arrives at the conclusion that both parties are on their good behavior, and that neither should indulge in over-confidence; that the one that plants itself on the soundest ground and manages its campaign with the greatest discretion in the comparatively short time between now and the Presidential election of 1880 is the one upon whose banner victory will perch in that election. The Times proceeds to reason thus:

"One obstacle, at least, that stands in the path of the Republicans is certainly underestimated by them. The election of a Republican President is possible indeed, but not at all probable, without the reclamation of some of the Southern States from the Democrats. A solid South is much more dangerous to the Republican party than it is to the integrity of the Union. To the latter, indeed, it can work no harm. If the impression was well founded that the South is still harboring treasonable designs upon the national life, the treason of to-day would be stamped out as surely and much more expeditious than the treason of eighteen years ago. But every sensible man knows such designs are not harbored.

"The South was never so loyal as she is to-day; she is loyal not from necessity, but as well from choice and from self interest, which is after all the strongest consideration. But she is not loyal to the Republican party. On the contrary, she hates it with a fervent hatred. How far such hatred is justifiable in view of the manner in which the Republicans have dealt with that section since the rebellion was crushed and the rebels sued for peace, it is not worth while to argue. That hatred exists is unquestionable, and it is quite as certain that the present managers of the Republican party cordially reciprocate the hostile feeling. There is no statesmanship in perpetuating this state of affairs. So long as it continues the Republicans must resign all hope of carrying a single Southern State."

THE FEVER AT MEMPHIS.

At the time of our last issue, it was the impression that the yellow fever at Memphis would perhaps not assume an epidemic form, but the worst fears have been realized, and the citizens for the past ten days have been leaving the doomed city as rapidly as possible. Up to date over fifty cases, and fifteen or twenty deaths are reported.

Assistance is being rendered by the War Department, and relief committees are being formed in Washington, and other cities. The very latest is that business is almost entirely suspended, and the outlook is gloomy in the extreme.

So far, it seems that the dreadful malady is confined to Memphis, though an occasional case or two has been reported from elsewhere.

A Memphis correspondent of the Philadelphia Times writes: "The origin of the fever this season is now believed to have been from privy vaults left uncleaned from last summer. The excreta and filth from the sick and dead of that scourge was all emptied into vaults in the ground. Landlords and householders were begged to clean them in midwinter, when there was no danger of breeding disease. They refused and in some instances enjoined legal enforcement through the courts. The filth never froze far beneath the surface, and in May, when the authorities began to stir the nasty subject again, it was only to stir the death-dealing effluvia among the people, and now householders reap the benefit in tenanted property, unhealthy and dying or absent citizens."

When the train on the Atlanta & Charlotte Air-Line Railroad which left this city going south Monday morning at 1 o'clock was within seven miles of Atlanta, about 11 o'clock of the same day, the engine, the No. 13, with Mr. Geo. M. Berry at the throttle, struck a Jersey cow on a sharp curve. The train was making about 35 miles an hour and the engine jumped the track and ran thus about 165 yards, when it was precipitated over an embankment some twenty or twenty-five feet below it. The postal car, the express and smoking cars, but the first-class coach and sleeper remained on. All the underworks of the engine were out smooth off, and when Conductor McCool and others got to the locomotive, they found Berry covered with the wood with which the tender had just been filled, the escaping steam scalding him and the smoke stifling him, and calling for water to put out the fire. The fireman had jumped off and escaped injury, but Mr. Berry stuck to his post like the man he is, while his engine plunged down the embankment and plowed up the ground. When released from his painful position it was found that while he had been very considerably bruised up and somewhat scalded about the legs, his injuries were not serious, and it is hoped that he will be on duty again in a few days.

Staring Starvation in the Face.

Within our recollection there has never been a season of greater financial depression, more absolute want and less hope for the future in this country than at the present time. The long continued drought has almost wholly ruined the crop and good farmers say that, even with the most favorable season from now until the crop is gathered, it cannot make more than two thirds yield. The merchants are beginning to refuse advances to their lien customers and many poor families have already been put on "a. l. diet." Several wagons left town last Saturday and the Saturday before without supplies and eight colored men told us that the merchants had closed down on them and they could get nothing to eat. This, perhaps, should be explained by saying that supplies have been refused only in those cases where the parties have taken up the full amount of their original liens. However this may be, there is a scarcity of something to eat in many homes and the future is very black to the farmer who is working on shares with mortgaged crop and bought giano. This situation is truly alarming and enough to excite most serious public concern. We have had no crop year at all like the present since 1845. The drought was very severe in that year and the crops almost total failure so that the people had to send to the mountains for their supplies; but the country was wealthy then and there was no suffering of any consequences such as the people.

Now the case is very different—the farmers are going to make nothing by their own efforts and there is no money to buy supplies from any outside market. The price of cotton last fall was so low that the farmers in many cases were not able to settle the indebtedness of that year and with no money and bad credit they began their operations for the present year. It is estimated that the crop surplus of last year was exhausted by the end of the winter and from the time seed was sown up to the present in the majority of cases the farmers bands have been living on advances by the merchants. How to escape the hard fate of the future and how the country can be extricated from the troubles into which it has fallen we confess our inability to discover. Nothing but the most miserly economy and the blessings of God can save our people from actual want and starvation.

A Remarkable Case.

[Correspondence of The Raleigh Observer.]
EDITOR OBSERVER: Noticed a statement alluded to in your paper of this morning, in regard to a negro man, who had been deaf and dumb from infancy, and who was recently restored to hearing and speech. The statement comes from Rev. Samuel Lander, an old friend of mine, formerly of Lincoln in this State, but at present a citizen of South Carolina. Those who know Mr. Lander will not question the honesty of his statement, for he is a gentleman of the highest character and strictest integrity.

Those who are familiar with the peculiarities of deaf mutes will hesitate long before putting any faith this remarkable (1) case. A person deaf and dumb from infancy might be restored to hearing and speech, (but we have never heard of such an instance), and if so, what language would such a person speak? Would he speak English, German, French, or any of the other modern languages?

One who has never heard a word during his whole life, upon a restoration to hearing, (or being enabled to hear, because it would not be a restoration,) would be as desitute of language as an infant. How would such a person know what a word or sound meant? Just as well might an English-speaking person, who never heard a word of German, attempt to speak or converse in that language, as for one deaf and dumb from infancy to speak in our language upon a restoration to hearing and speech. That such a person could be taught to speak is admitted, but it would be by the same slow and tedious process that one is taught to speak a foreign language.

Deaf mutes learn by and through the eye, but have no conception of harmonious sound. They can and do make noise, but they know nothing of the effect of this noise.

There is a class of persons who are called as deaf mutes, and who are often admitted into our institutions, known as semi-mutes, whose hearing and speech are frequently improved, but they are not of that class known as deaf and dumb from infancy. Their deafness is the result of disease, by which two of their nerves are impaired. It may be that the case referred to was one of this class. The article says, though, that the negro man was deaf and dumb from infancy; therefore the presumption is that he had never heard a distinct word or sound, and upon his restoration, was enabled to converse, etc. This statement will hardly be received as true by those familiar with the peculiar characteristics of deaf mutes.

Mr. Lander has evidently been imposed upon by some "sharp darkey."

The Raleigh Visitor learns that Mr. W. D. Wood, of Pleasant Grove township, Johnston county, has just threshed out his oats. They were of a select seed and yielded one hundred and sixteen bushels from three acres. The weight was thirty five pounds to the bushel. The oats were raised on land without any fertilizer of any kind. Mr. Wood had about thirty acres in wheat which is said to be proportionately as fine as his oats. He runs three plows and expects to make seventy five bales of cotton and three hundred barrels of corn.

Ingersoll's Last Sermon.

THE PATH A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO A DEAD CLEGGMAN.
The Rev. Alexander Clark, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a journalist and the editor of a Methodist organ, whose death was recently announced, has received most eulogistic and tender tributes from the religious press of the country. He died in Georgia some two weeks ago, while he was the guest of Gov. Colquitt. As a journalist Mr. Clark had been somewhat conspicuous for his zeal in combatting the views of Col. Ingersoll, while treating that gentleman with personal fairness. He once visited him in his Peoria home, and in a published letter spoke in the very highest terms of the personal and domestic character of his illustrious theological opponent. Now that Mr. Clark is dead, Col. Ingersoll has paid the following tribute to the manliness and kindness of the deceased:

THE REV. ALEXANDER CLARK.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Upon the grave of the Rev. Alexander Clark I wish to place one flower.

Utterly desitute of cold, dogmatic pride, that often passes for the love of God; without the arrogance of the "elect;" simple, free, and kind—this earnest man made me his friend by being mine. I forgot that he was a Christian, and he seemed to forget that I was not, while each remembered that the other was a man.

Frank, candid, and sincere, he practiced what he preached, and looked with the holy eyes of charity upon the failings and mistakes of men. He believed in the power of kindness, and spanned with divine sympathy the hideous gulf that separates the fallen from the pure. Giving freely to others the rights that he claimed for himself, it never occurred to him that his God hated a brave and honest unbeliever. He remembered that even an infidel has rights that love respects; that hatred has no saving power; and that, in order to be a Christian, it is not necessary to become less than a man. He knew that no one can be malign into kindness; that epithets cannot convince; that curses are not arguments; and that the finger of scorn never points towards heaven. With the generosity of an honest man, he accorded to all the fullest liberty of thought, knowing, as he did, that in the realm of mind a chain is but a curse.

For this man I entertained the profoundest respect. In spite of the taunts and jeers of his brethren, he publicly proclaimed that he would treat infidels with fairness and respect; that he would endeavor to convince them by argument and win them with love. He insisted that the God he worshipped loved the well being even of an atheist. In this grand position he stood almost alone. Tender, just and loving, where others were harsh, vindictive and cruel; he challenged the respect of every honest man. The heartiness and kindness with which this generous man treated me can never be excelled. He admitted that I had not lost, and could not lose, a single right by the expression of my honest thought. Neither did he believe that a servant could win the respect of a generous master by persecuting and maligning those whom the master would willingly forgive.

While this good man was living his brethren blamed him with having treated me with fairness. But I trust, now that he has left the shore touched by the mysterious sea that has never yet borne on any wave the image of a homeward sail, this crime will be forgiven him by those who still remain to preach the love of God.

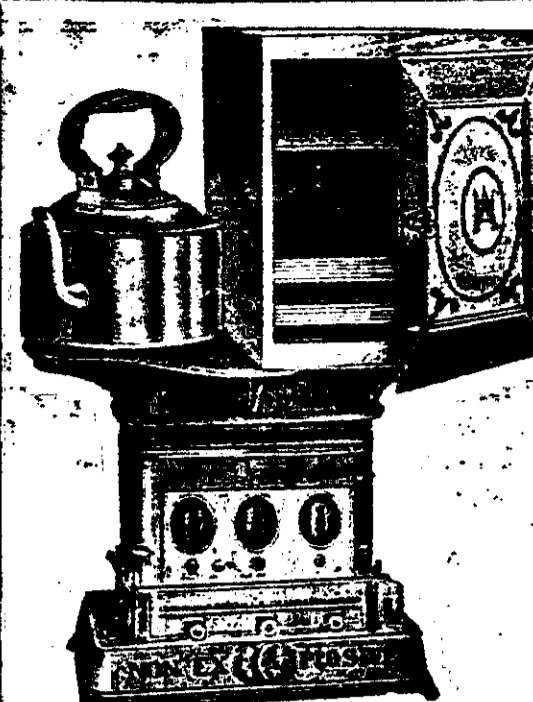

His sympathies were not confined within the prison of a creed, but ran out and over the walls like vines, hiding the cruel rocks and rusted bars with leaf and flower. He could not echo with his heart the fiendish sentence of eternal fire. In spite of book and creed, he read "between the lines" the words of tenderness and love, with promises for all the world. Above, beyond the dogmas of his church humane even to the verge of heresy; causing some to doubt his love of God because he failed to hate his unbelieving fellow-men—he labored for the welfare of mankind, and to his work gave up his life with all his heart.

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

—Of the growing crop of tobacco we are compelled to look the fact in the face that the drought is a disaster, the consequences of which cannot be measured. Under no circumstances can a crop of good tobacco be now made. The first planted is beyond control, having reached a stage of premature maturity which no after rains can affect. The part of the crop planted after the dry weather set in has grown but little. If rains should fall within a week or ten days, this may grow off and a late fall mature it; but it is conceded that the amount of fine tobacco will be small.

MINING NOTES.—There was a cleaning up at the Rudisill mine yesterday, and a handsome showing was made of the week's work. Mr. Smart, the superintendent, brought in with him 960 pennyweights of the shining metal. This is worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $800, and the expense of working the mine with the present force of hands is less than $200 per week. Six hundred dollars as the clear profit for one week's work is something worth mentioning. No other business in North Carolina will make no such a showing as this—Char. Observer.
